PROFILE

I am an Assistant Professor in the Department of (English) Business Communication, where I engage with literature through both academic rigor and humanistic insight. My scholarly interests lie in Dalit literature and African American literature, fields that illuminate powerful narratives of resilience, identity, and social transformation. I bring an interdisciplinary approach to both teaching and research. I am deeply passionate about reading, speaking, and inspiring students to think critically and emphatically. My work is driven by a commitment to fostering inclusive classrooms that celebrate diverse voices and meaningful dialogue.
